

The world's top cyclists back in Hamburg

All 18 teams from the WorldTour and five from cycling's second division make up again the starting field for the BEMER Cyclassics 2024. On September 8, the starting signal will be given for a top-class field of riders and an exciting cycling race of the highest category through Hamburg and Schleswig-Holstein.

The BEMER Cyclassics is the penultimate WorldTour race on European soil this season, where the sprinters have a chance of winning. Like Mads Pedersen last year, who put Danny van Poppel and three-time Hamburg winner Elia Viviani (2017 to 2019) in his place. Or surprise winner Marco Haller, who was faster than Wout Van Aert in 2022 out of a small group that crossed the finish line just seconds ahead of the field.

Their teams, Lidl - Trek, BORA - hansgrohe, Ineos Grenadiers and Visma | Lease a Bike will be fighting for victory on the Waseberg and also on the home straight in Mönckebergstraße, just like their competitors. Alpecin - Deceuninck, Intermarché - Wanty, dsm - firmenich PostNL and Jayco AlUla, whose squads focus on sprints and one-day races, also have this date marked on their calendar.

Israel - PremierTech and Lotto Dstny are two UCI ProTeams that have repeatedly competed in Hamburg in the past. However, it will be a premiere for the teams Uno-X Mobility from Norway as well as Q36.5 and Tudor Pro Cycling Team, who will start with a Swiss license.
